

Pictures and Words

I transformed the archaic image of cavalier perspective into three-dimensional form to show the way of seeing in different times. That's when it hit me that, to a certain extent, the progress of the visual arts could be described as the discovery of techniques for presenting.

Portrait Art of Han Dynasty (206 BC–220 AD)
cavalier perspective or multi-point perspective

focus perspective

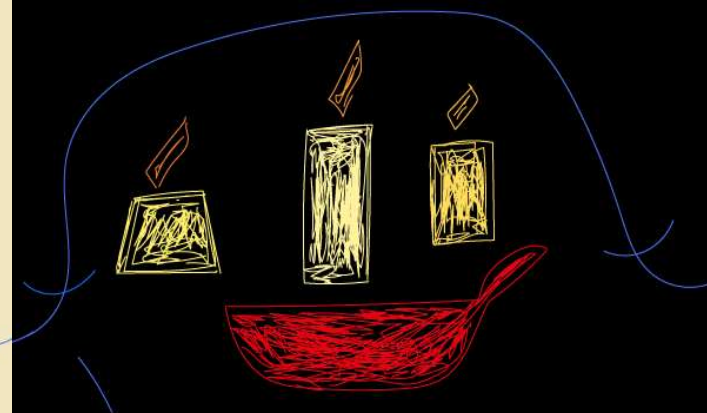

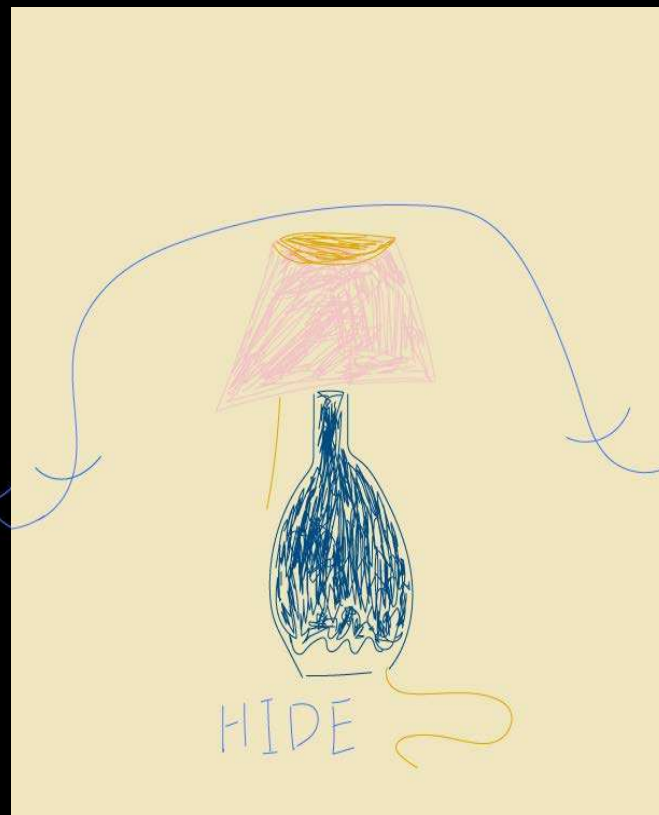

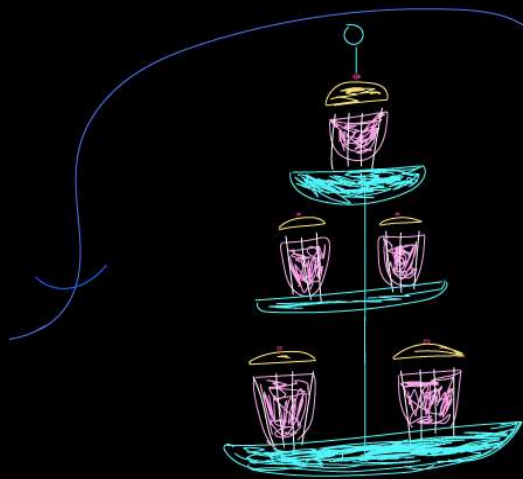

Design Graphic--- “New Wave”

For as long as I can remember, I have had an irrational fear of the ocean, those large, black waves came up in the form of monsters, roaring in my dream.

In order to overcome Thalassophobia, I created “New Wave”. “New Wave” is an illustration of a transparent wave covered with a blue line, which contains a beautiful view, such as a bunch of flowers or a cupcake.

Images Edited

It is now nearly a century and a half since Paul Delaroche said : “From today painting is dead” in the face of Daguerre’s invention of photography. To be frank, I used to have a dismissive attitude towards photography, because of the endless number of prints or copies, the cliché diminished the sense of unique identity.

I prefer a project mixing different elements and techniques together, creating chaos and generating a good group composition.

*The images with watermarks belong to my personal blog.

Link: WeChat public ID: vangogh2016

< Relativity of simultaneity >

<Mr. Tree>
it's tipped over, and it's still growing.

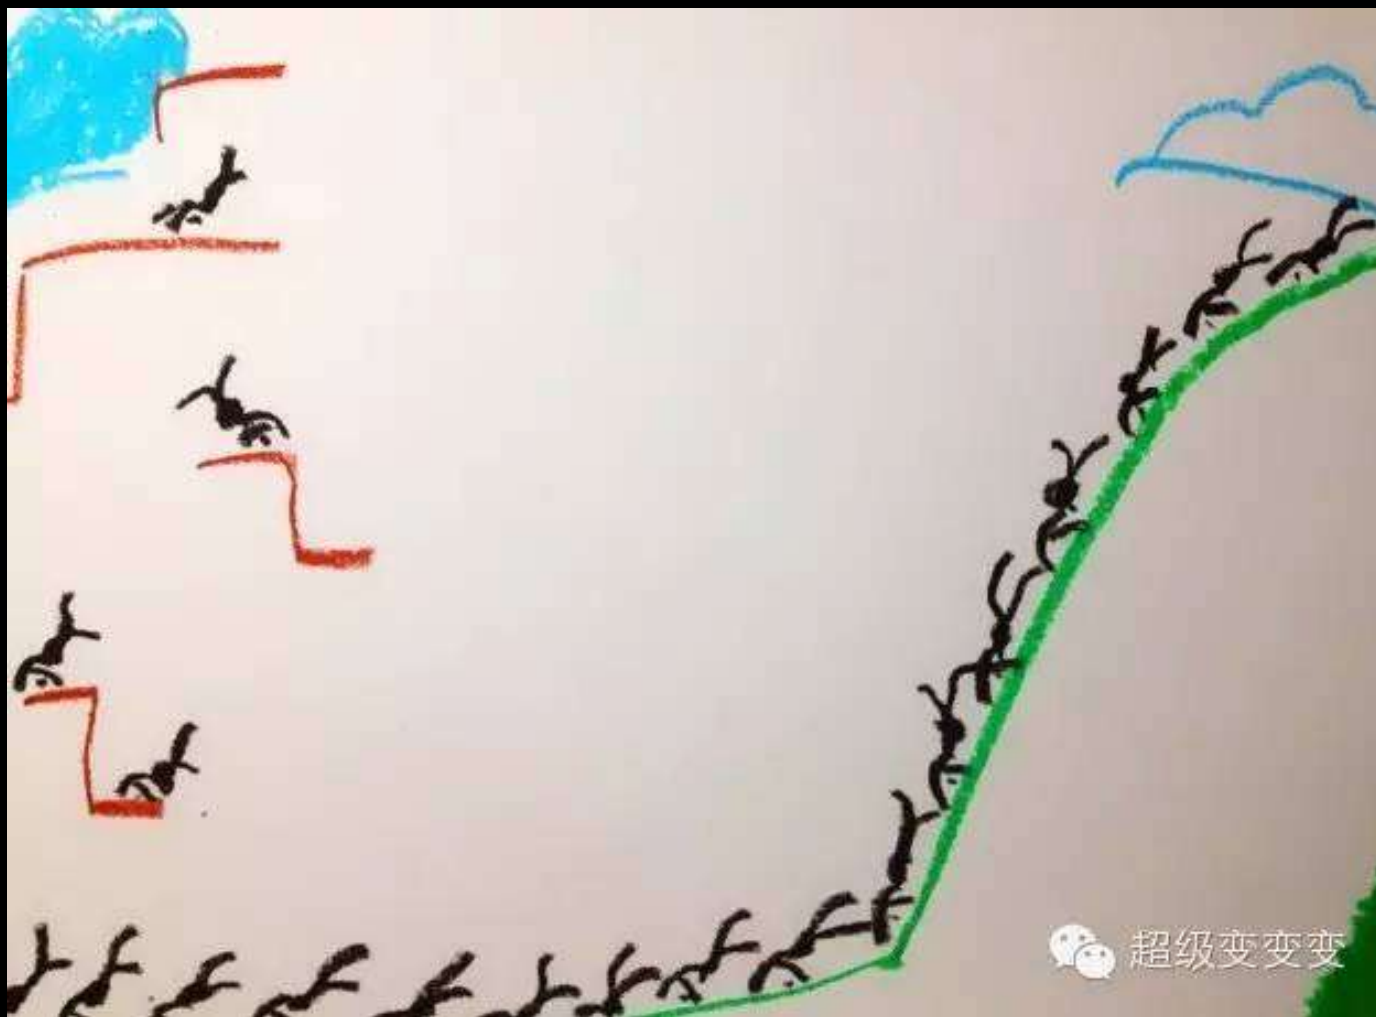

<Starbucks 'cat paw cup'>

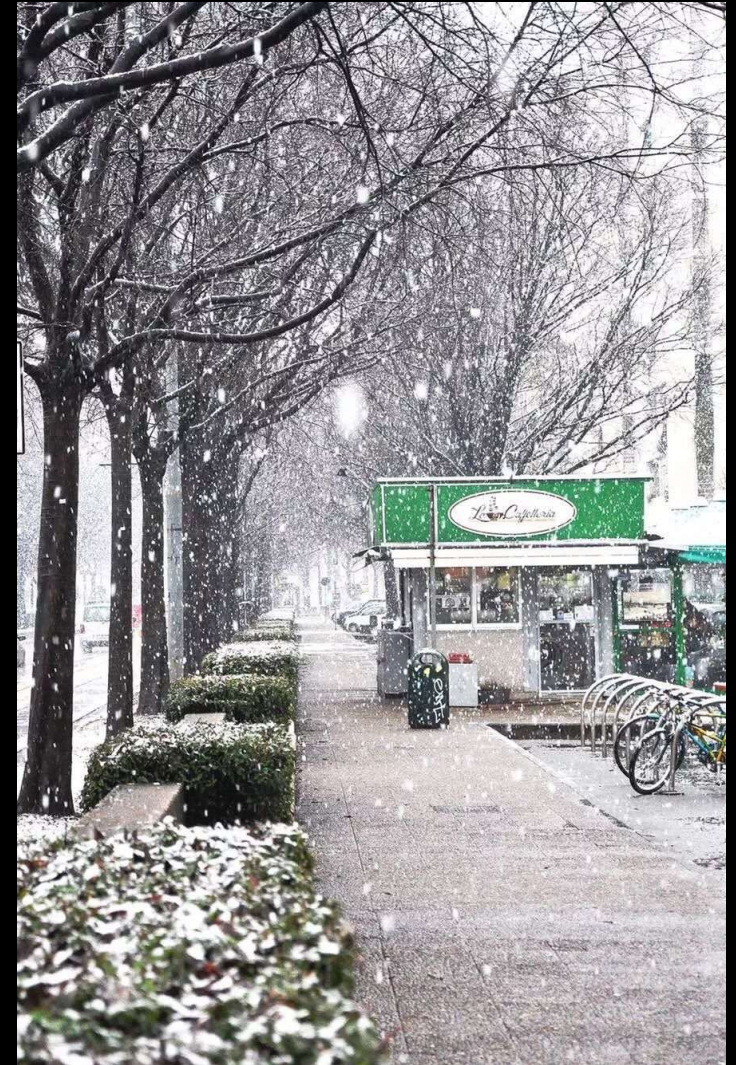

<Loss to follow-up>

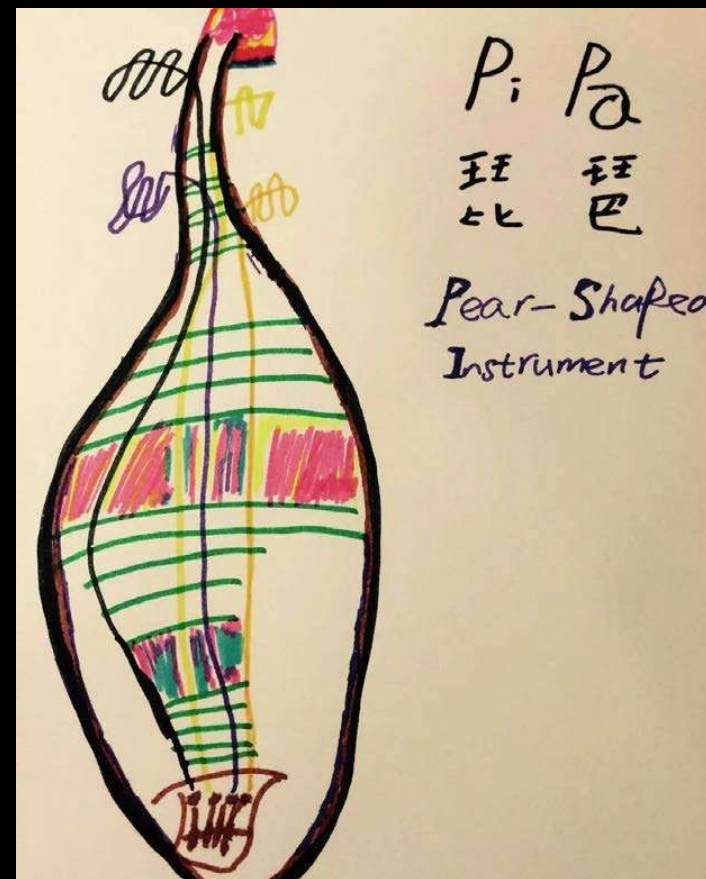

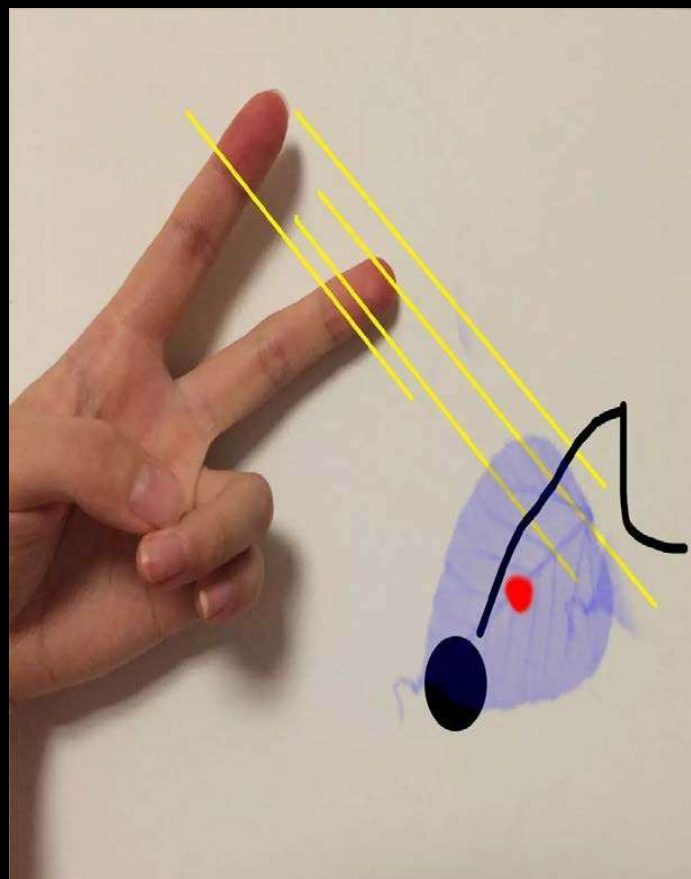

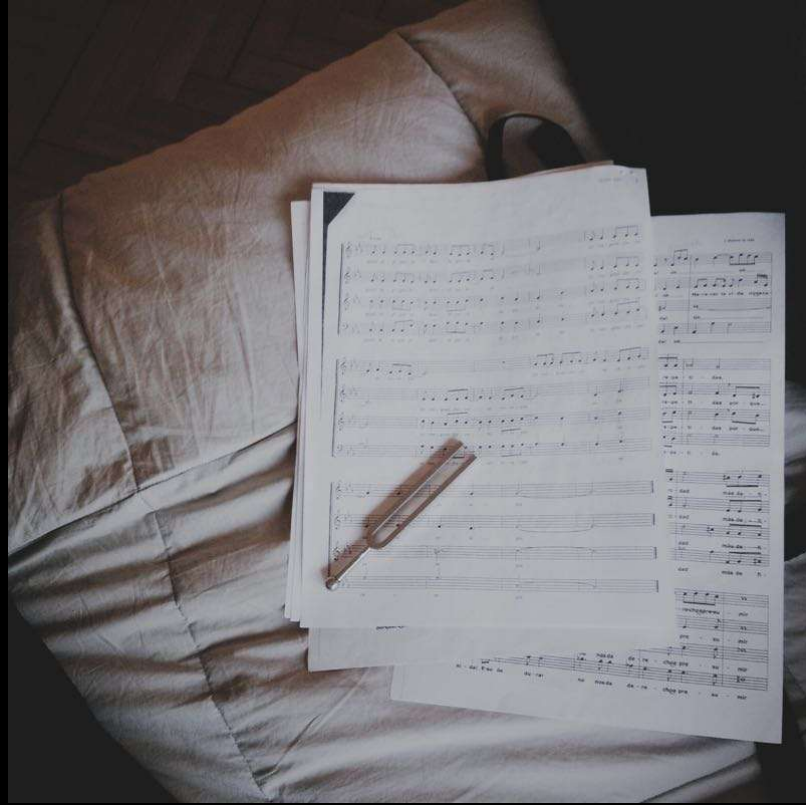

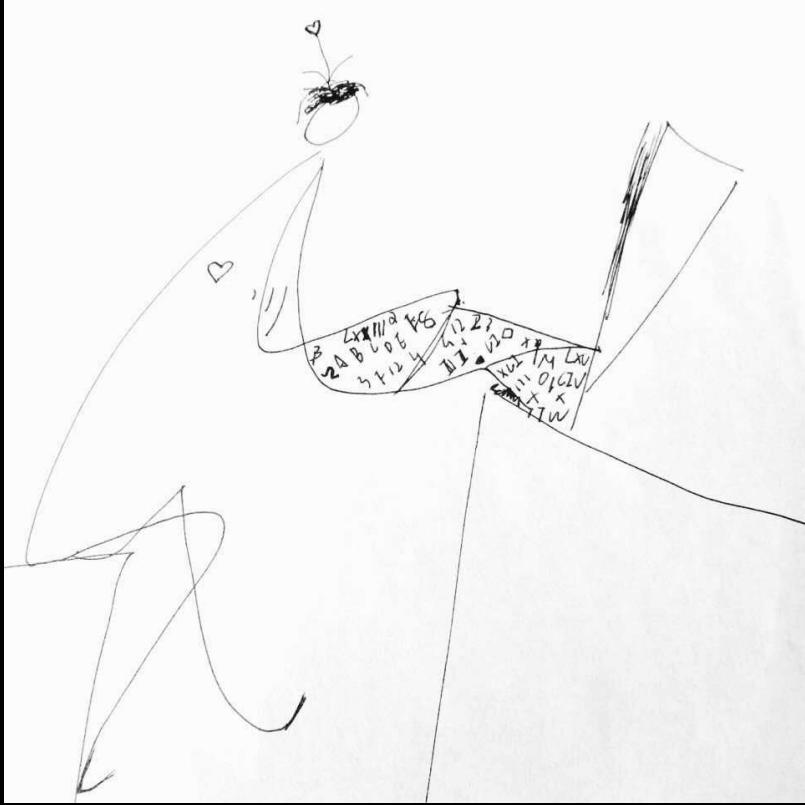

<Time Repairman>

THE END

THANKS